Sketches of Little Old New York
By J. M. McIntyre

When you found the entire edition in the attic he understood. The reason the book did not sell," said Mr. Davis, "is because some one must have read it."

Broadway diners are now having the thrill of bowing to a head waiter who has just come back from the trenches wounded. The hero is Charles Faiselle, a Frenchman, who has been the head waiter in the Knickerbocker grill since the hotel opened to the public.

He married a New York girl and returned to France on his honeymoon when the war broke out. He was immediately sent to the front where he remained seven months. During an engagement he was shot twice in the leg and after remaining in a Paris hospital three months was sent home.

His wife had preceded him and three days before his boat reached New York she gave birth to a fine son to celebrate the home-coming of the fighter. Faiselle was given his old job back, but expects to return to the trenches shortly.

Isadora Duncan, her press agents and her French girls have called for Greece. Isadora is out known as the result of her attempt to uplift benighted America. She wished to raise Americans up to the point where they could appreciate her work and as the result of such endeavor she found it necessary to make a public appeal so that she could get out of this country.

Such are the tribulations of one who strives for art with the big A. In contrast to Miss Duncan's misfortune comes the news that Lydia Lopokova has purchased a great estate on Long Island and Louis H. Chalif, the Russian dancer, has bought one of the finest apartment houses in the residential section of New York.

GRAMPY AND THE FOLKS—Behind the Scenes

KAISER CALLED BEAST OF PREY

Former Intimate Friend Pictures Emperor as Cunning Hypocrite.

BOWS TO VON TIRPITZ

Admiral Is Only Man to Whom William Never Dictates, Says Author.

The German Kaiser as a hypocritical, cunning potentate who for twenty-five years secretly conspired against the peace of the world is depicted by a German nobleman claiming to have been formerly one of his most intimate friends in a volume of memoirs recently published in London under the title, "The Berlin Court Under William II."

The author, signs himself "Count Axel von Scherwing." The intrinsinc of Paris, however, says he is really Prince von Fuensteinberg, who accompanied the Kaiser on his yachting trip to Norway in August.

In what purports to be an unimpeached record of moments spent in friendly talk with the Emperor during the days preceding and immediately following the outbreak of hostilities in the Balkans, the Kaiser is shown as a man who had hoped for such an incident as the Sarajevo crime and welcomed the break between Serbia and Austria as an opportunity to throw off the mask of peace-maker, so that he might emulate the great deeds of his grandfather, William I.

Wants Absolute Power.

"The desire for domination over everybody and everything," says the writer, "the thirst for absolute power, has never left the Emperor. He wants to control human beings as well as events, to assert his own personality in everything he touches. Thus the calm of Europe has been ruffled on more than one occasion by his ostentatious speech and action on his part."

The book is not without its testimony to the Kaiser's virtues. A decided reformer is recorded to have been effected by the visit of William II to his mother, Queen Victoria of Great Britain. The Kaiser is shown as a man who had hoped for such an incident as the Sarajevo crime and welcomed the break between Serbia and Austria as an opportunity to throw off the mask of peace-maker, so that he might emulate the great deeds of his grandfather, William I.

Admired Von Tirpitz.

The Emperor never dictated, but quietly talks over things. They settle matters together in a friendly, earnest way.

On board his yacht in the Baltic on July 1, a few days before the assassination of Grand Duke Ferdinand, the Kaiser seemed meditative, importunate.

Proposed World Peace.

"This may be the last holiday I shall enjoy for a long time," he said to the writer. "Who knows what the next months may bring us? Sometimes the necessity arises for a nation to assert itself, if only because she feels that otherwise others will do so, and do it to her disadvantage. A spark may fall that will set fire to the whole world."

On July 2 the writer dined with Moltke, head of the general staff. "The Emperor," said the general, "has been deceiving us for years. While pretending to be an adversary of war, he has in his own mind been continuously thinking of the day when he could declare it. Germany will win. Krupp does not exist in vain. But it is this victory that I am afraid. It will be accompanied by such ruin, such misfortunes, such distress, that all the civilization of which we are so proud will perish in the storm of war."

The Kaiser is quoted on July 2: "I do not wish for war, but I will not go a single step to prevent its breaking out. I will wait it without flinching, and should I find myself entangled in it then indeed will I make it without mercy and without remorse sparing no one and nothing, destroying all I cannot take."

"A Beast of Prey."

"The Emperor that evening," says the recorder, "seemed to have been transformed into a kind of beast of prey."

"This sovereign whom I have served and loved," says the writer, in his diary of July 28, "and whom I thought was a just, conscientious man, had been suddenly transformed into a cunning, hypocritical, sly being who for years in the secret of his thoughts meditated upon this avenging justice which I fear is about to be perpetrated."

The final picture given is that of the Emperor standing at a window of the palace looking out upon the statue of William I erected in the vast square. It was just before the declaration of war flew about Europe. The Kaiser pointed with his finger at the bronze figure representing his grandfather and said: "The great Emperor whose place I fill today had his army. I have my cannon."

ANACOSTIA EYESORE DOOMED.

High Brick Wall at Logan Park Will Be Lowered.

After a determined effort for the past three years, the Anacostia Citizens' Association has succeeded in convincing the office of public buildings and grounds that the high brick wall at the south end of Logan Park is unsightly and out of keeping with the remainder of the park, and has secured the assurance that it will be lowered. The wall was about twelve feet high, and gave the appearance of a fort rather than a park. On Saturday the workmen began their work of lowering the wall.

The Serse sisters, singing evangelists of Ocean City, N. J., will conduct a revival in the Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church. The pastor, Rev. G. Leroy White, announced yesterday that these services would begin June 6.

Commander C. J. P. Weber, of Nelson A. Miles Camp, No. 1, United Spanish War Veterans, has practically completed the program for the exercises to be held at the Government Hospital for the Insane on the afternoon of May 29. A parade is to be held from the entrance to the ground to Poplar Springs, where the exercises are to be held, and several societies and clubs are to participate. The hospital will take part in this feature.

METHODS OF CARNEGIE PEACE BODY ATTACKED

Representative Gardner Says Letter Sent Newspaper Editors Suggests "Attempt to Bribe and Pollute Sources of Public Information."

Intimation verging on direct assertion that a Carnegie peace society is "warping public opinion by reprehensible methods" is made by Representative A. P. Gardner, of Massachusetts, in a note to Chairman Frank P. Walsh calling the attention of the Commission on Industrial Relations to a letter sent by the Carnegie Peace Society to the editors of a number of newspapers throughout the country.

Had this peace society letter been sent out by a political or business organization, suggests Mr. Gardner, it probably would have been described and accepted as "an attempt to bribe and pollute the sources of public information." Mr. Gardner's letter to Chairman Walsh reads as follows:

"Washington, May 22, 1915.

"My dear Sir: You are carrying on an investigation of the effect and propriety of various foundations, such as the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Peace Fund. Herewith, I enclose you a letter which is being sent out by the Carnegie Peace Society to newspaper editors throughout the country. The Carnegie Peace Society is a section of the New York Peace Society, of which Andrew Carnegie is the president. I call your attention to the following passages in this letter:

"Between now and the termination of the European war, an enormous sum of money will be expended for publicity work. A generous proportion will go for newspaper advertising to bring home to Congress at attitude of the American

GETTING A START.

"IT'S NICE TO GET UP IN THE MORNING."

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, JR.

Some of my readers probably have listened to the songs of the world-famous Harry Lauder, and particularly to one, the chorus of which begins, "It's nice to get up in the morning, but it's nicer to lie in your bed."

Perhaps it is "nicer to lie in your bed" than it is to get up in the morning, but it is not so good to himself, no good to his employer, no good to the world; nicer for the lazy fellow, the inefficient, the kicker, the fault-finder, the chiseler who does not realize that the most important personage in the world to him is himself, who does not feel that all the world, or rather, all his world, revolves around his personality, and that he has a place which no one else can occupy as he should fill it.

I do not mean to say that every failure is an over sleeper, but I never knew a failure who did not love to oversleep. Half-way, I am inclined to think that more than half—the men and women who work, especially those who take suburban trains or trolleys, remain in bed until the last moment, throw themselves into their clothes, swallow their breakfast in a hurry, run to the car or station, and enter their offices physically injured and mentally tired. They do this when they would have plenty of time if they rose fifteen minutes earlier.

Any attempt on your part to make up for late nights by late mornings is a waste of time. It is better to get up fifteen minutes earlier than to get up fifteen minutes later. Hard work does not hurt any one, provided he is not physically incapacitated. It is rush and worry which undermine the mental and physical constitutions. Working steadily is not likely to be injurious. Rushing is sure to be.

No one is prepared to do his best work unless he has time for a bath, time for dressing, time for his breakfast, and time to take his train.

For the sake of fifteen minutes more sleep the majority of workers enter their offices and factories only to render their best service to themselves or to others.

Of course, you must have sufficient sleep, but don't take it at the wrong end of the twenty-four hours. Get that sleep at the start. Go to bed a little earlier. Don't get up a little later. Late
